Medicating for pain

When is it OK to medicate for pain? If my relative is in hospice, should I permit the use of drugs that hasten his or her death?

When someone we love is dying, we do not want him or her to be in pain. It is only natural to want to ease or end all suffering. The Catechism of the Catholic Church offers these guidelines: “The use of painkillers to alleviate the sufferings of the dying, even at the risk of shortening their days, can be morally in conformity with human dignity. If death is not willed as either an end or a means, but only foreseen and tolerated as inevitable” (CCC2279). In other words, it is permissible to medicate for pain, but you cannot use narcotics as an end or means to hasten someone’s death - only to alleviate pain and to minimize a person’s suffering. Drugs cannot be used to directly cause a person’s death.

It is important to discuss the kinds of treatment a person would want when he or she is dying. An important question is, “Would you want to be medicated even if that would mean you would not be conscious?” It is also important to have a discussion with your priest. Many times one is forced to make terrible decisions about medical care, and it is always good to have someone we trust who can help us make the best choice.
